A lonely diagnosis

Young adults make up less than 10% of all cancer patients, but this age group is the least likely to survive. Many non-profit organizations provide support to younger and older cancer patients, but young adults are neglected. Many young adults diagnosed with cancer go through it alone, without a spouse or the support of parents. During those formative years when many young people advance their sarah, 27

At 27, I was diagnosed with thyroid carcinoma. I had just finished school and begun working in my new profession. Although I had some insurance coverage, the co-payments and co-insurance fees were substantial, and one medication was not covered at all. The FLY Foundation covered two months of my rent while I was unable to work. I am forever grateful.

drew, 30

I was diagnosed with Stage 3 testicular cancer at the age of 30. I worked very hard in my 20's to build a career, buy a home, and prepare myself financially for the future. Having had two surgeries and four cycles of chemotherapy, I was unable to work my 50-hour/week, salaried job. By paying my mortgage and HOA fees for a three-month period, The FLY Foundation made this difficult period in my life a whole lot easier. I truly believe that I tolerated my chemotherapy therapy as well as I did because this organization lifted a huge weight off my shoulders.

tiffany, 28

A few months after getting married, I was diagnosed with breast cancer at the age of 28. Life doesn't pause when going through breast cancer. The FLY Foundation helped with the burden of medical bills piling up. Now, my husband and I can focus on getting our lives back together instead of trying to get out of debt.
